Getting Started with Data Analytics - Jessica Ayodele

This free guide is meant to help anyone looking to transition to the Data Analytics field or just learn data analytics as part of upskilling. As someone who is self-taught using online courses and tried to figure out the pathway on my own, this guide is very dear to me. I hope it helps you. A few things to note first:

1. The roadmap I provided at the end can be customized to suit your schedule. There's no rush when it comes to learning as everyone learns at their own pace.
2. You will probably need only one resource per tool. For example, for Excel, I provided 2 resources to learn, just use the one you're most comfortable with. You can also find other resources as long as you cover the topics listed in the roadmap.
3. I highly recommend working on projects or testing out your skills with a dataset. I'll put a link to datasets at the end.

Here are the recommended courses and links to start:

1. Maths & Statistics: You only need the basics

2. Excel: Pick the one you like between the two below

5. Tableau

As part of learning Tableau. I've also found Tableau Prep is a useful tool to know as well cos it helps to automate Tableau Workflows. I've added a link for that as well.

7. Guided Projects

I recommend checking out projects previously done by people so you see how projects are structured. Here are a few of mine - https://jess-analytics.medium.com/

You can find datasets here to work on projects-> here

Alex has a ton of guided projects you can use.
